introduction

- Life is influenced by biotic and abiotic factors
- Abiotic factors [soil, water (precipitation, storage etc.), light, temperature, humidity, air]
- effect on species richness, abundance, productivity
- influence individual species as well as ecosystem
- affect the size of populations (e.g. Queen of ant, bees), sex (reptiles, Cannabis)
- We are not alone
- the relation between species that live together in a community

types of interactions

- Direct Interactions:
 - direct impact of one individual on another and are not mediated or transmitted through a third individual
- Indirect Interactions:
 - a species can, through its direct interaction with some species, indirectly influence the abundance of another species with which it is not interacting directly (Dissect the curricula)

Mimicry in Plants

- plants evolve to resemble another organism physically or chemically
- results of natural selection
- it attracts pollinators or deters predators
- imitating species is called the mimic
- imitated species is known as the model
- mediating species is known as the receiver, dupe or operator

Pouyannian mimicry

- Many plants have evolved to appear like insects
- wide-ranging benefits including increasing pollination
- flowers mimic a potential female mate visually
- the key stimuli are often chemical and tactile

Dodo bird and tambalacoque or dodo tree

- Sideroxylon grandiflorum* (family Sapotaceae) endemic to Mauritius.
- The dodo, which became extinct in the 17th century, ate tambalacoque fruits, and only by passing through the digestive tract could the seeds germinate.

Phytochemistry versus Plant Biochemistry

- Biochemistry deals with the Primary Metabolites (essential organic compounds)
- Deals with the living processes of organisms.
- Nucleic acids, Proteins, Carbohydrates, Lipids, Vitamins, Minerals etc and their metabolism
- Phytochemistry includes mainly Secondary Metabolites and structural and distribution aspects of Carbohydrates, Proteins and Lipids.

Secondary metabolites

- The secondary metabolites, due to ignorance on their function were much despised by Biochemists and Physiologists who named them as “Excretory Products”, “End products”, “By-products” etc and even as “Luxury diversifications” (By Heslop Harrison). They were thought to be “Useless” to plants.
- They are responsible for survival and defense of plants.
- They are synthesized by “specialized metabolic pathways” for specific functions and not involved in Primary Metabolic pathways. It is believed that once produced, they never get metabolized. They are adaptations produced by plants to give them definite advantage to plants in a Biotic environment. Thus they are “Survival Strategies” of plants that are different in different plant groups. But the boundaries of these two groups are still fluid. Some of the primary metabolites are found to assist the plant in survival, a function attributed to secondary metabolites, while some of the latter do ———— ops indicating a regular turn over of these compounds.

Purine alkaloids

- Coffee, Cocoa and Tea

Indole alkaloids

Epheba, Serpagantha, Vinca
